

Hiring for Good

Giving back to the community that has helped our business thrive

We consider it our responsibility to make a positive impact on the communities we serve. We invest in organizations that help our community improve at their jobs, help diversify great organizations, and help people find work that they love. Entelo currently partners with two world-class non-profits, CodeEd and The Stride Center.

CodeEd

For each new hire our customers make through Entelo, we donate one year's worth of coding instruction to a young woman in the CodeEd program.

In 2008, only 7% of middle school girls reported that computer engineering would be a desirable career. When you consider that occupations within computer science are projected to account for nearly two-thirds of all job growth between now and 2020, this statistic is particularly worrisome.

CodeEd is a non-profit that teaches computer science to girls in underserved communities. They partner with schools and programs that serve low-income girls and provide them with volunteer teachers, computer science course offerings, and computers to work with. Students enjoy programming and building, and are able to see the completion of their projects as their own reward.

The Stride Center

For each new hire our customers make through Entelo, we sponsor one certification test for a student at The Stride Center.

Even as California continues to lead the technological innovation that drives the economy, concentrated pockets of profound unemployment remain. The people who live in these communities, where close to 40 percent of families are living in poverty, are the people The Stride Center serves.

The Stride Center is a San Francisco Bay Area non-profit that empowers those who face barriers to employment attain self-sufficiency through IT education and career guidance.

The Stride Center doesn't just train its students in IT – it prepares them in every aspect for a new career. Entelo employees help Stride Center students prepare for new opportunities by helping students learn how to interview more effectively, develop a strong “elevator pitch,” and build social profiles to best present themselves to future employers.
